

Further legal arguments in claim against Gov't

Armoured cars for sale

Want to buy an armoured car? Such vehicles are being offered for sale in Hong Kong by certain importers, the "China Mail" ascertained yesterday.

The fighting vehicles, offered to the public here, are being exported by a firm in Southampton.

They are, however, without armaments which can be installed after purchase: provided the necessary official permission is given.

In addition to armoured cars, the Southampton firm is also seeking buyers for unarmoured Government vehicles—Diesel-engined trucks and petrol-driven tankers.

A Government official stated yesterday that there is no restriction on the importation of armoured vehicles, but that re-exportation would probably be prohibited.

The armoured cars that are being offered for sale include: Six-wheeled armoured cars, models M.K.T. 17E and K.T.T. 17E-2, powered by two six-cylinder GMC petrol engines, power-operated gun turrets, hydraulic gear, run hydraulic steering, combat tyres, radio inter-communications, and periscope, and Universal carrier model No. 2, M. K. Ford (Canadian).

Whether or not there have been any buyers could not be ascertained.

St. Mary's Church bazaar will be held on Saturday at 11 a.m. in the Church Hall, Causeway Bay. It will be officially opened by Mr. J. M. Wong.

Further legal arguments were put forward yesterday by counsel for Mr. G. S. Kennedy-Skipston in opposition to the application by the Crown to strike out his statement of claim at the Supreme Court.

Mr. Kennedy-Skipston, a former Hong Kong Government servant, had filed a claim against the Attorney General for alleged arrears of salary and rent allowance.

The plaintiff, who resides at 4B Hankow Road, asks also in his statement of claim for a declaration that the Governor had exceeded his powers in purporting to dismiss him on February 11, 1942.

Mr. Charles Losby, KC, and Mr. E. A. Bernacchi are representing Mr. Kennedy-Skipston on instructions of C. A. S. Russ and Stewart.

The Attorney General is represented by the Solicitor General, Mr. G. E. Strickland, and Mr. A. Lonsdale, Crown Counsel.

The amount claimed for in the statement of claim is $164,732.45, being the balance of arrears of salary and $3,429.70 as rent allowance.

Interest thereon until judgment, or payment, as well as the costs of the action, is also claimed for by plaintiff.

The present hearing, which is being heard by the Senior Puisne Judge, Mr. Justice Gaud, involves only the preliminary point of law arising out of the claim.

The preliminary point to be decided arose out of the contention of the defendant that in any event the plaintiff has no right to remuneration, which, it is submitted, cannot be enforced against the Crown by the Court in these proceedings.

Counter-claim

The Attorney General further contends that the plaintiff may consequently only look to the bounty of the Crown in this connection.

On the basis of this argument, the Crown made an application to strike out the plaintiff's statement of claim.

The Attorney General's foregoing contentions were set out in paragraph 16 of a counter-claim filed by the defence.

Turning to submissions by the Solicitor General the day before, Mr. Losby said that the act of the Governor-in-Council in purporting to dismiss Mr. Kennedy-Skipston was part of a quayside judicial body.

Mr. Kennedy-Skipston was invited to subject himself—and which he did at his own expense.

There was an error on the face of the proceedings involved, as a result of which his client was in fact not dismissed at all, counsel submitted.

Assuming that it will depend on the evidence which the will put in support of his proposition, Mr. Losby told the Court that after the suspension of a Cadet Officer, Class I, in 1942—while he said, was totally void—he was still retained in the civil service until 1948—with continued promises that the matter would be looked into by a quayside judicial body, and that, upon its decision, his remuneration or otherwise would be dealt with.

Counsel went on to say that the judicial body in September 1948 found largely in favour of Mr. Kennedy-Skipston, and not against him. Nevertheless, it failed in such a way that there was an error in the proceedings. Mr. Losby mentioned that the committee of inquiry found Kennedy-Skipston guilty of disloyalty, not to the Crown, but to the service of which he was a member.

He was going to prove in evidence that the entire procedure was envisaged under section 68 of the Regulations concerned, counsel went on. From first to last, the procedure set down under the section in question was carried out, until the last moment, when after a close examination of the section, it was found that the Governor was himself an integral part of the quayside judicial body.

In the course of further statements by Mr. Losby that he was calling evidence to show also that his client was a Class One administrative officer and a man of experience, Mr. Strickland voiced his objection to Mr. Losby's statements.

Point of law

What they were arguing at present was about a point of law, the Solicitor General said. The statements made by counsel for the plaintiff that he was calling certain evidence to support his contentions was irrelevant to the issue they were arguing on.

Mr. Justice Gaud then ruled that Mr. Losby should confine himself to the matter at present before the Court as contained in the statement of claim.

In the afternoon, Mr. Bernacchi addressed the Court on another aspect of the matter. Referring to the case in which William Henry Cowie was successful in having the application granted for suing the Government, counsel submitted that precisely the same principles involved applied in the present case.

There has been a complete misconception of the position and there was complete confusion in paragraph 16 of the defence counterclaim between a defence of public policy and a plea of no jurisdiction, Mr. Bernacchi stated.

Turning to the question of the act of the quayside judicial body in September 1948, Mr. Bernacchi submitted that the act in question was null and void. In any event, at least up to September 1948, Mr. Kennedy-Skipston was a servant of the Crown, he added.

In this connection, the plaintiff's case was that up to that time, the salary owing to him had accrued Mr. Bernacchi went on. This, he said, was what the plaintiff is claiming for.

After further legal submissions, hearing was adjourned until 10 a.m. today.

Rescued from Harbour

This 23-year-old woman from Shanghai jumped into the Harbour near Queen's Pier yesterday. She was rescued by a man who was passing by at the time. Other pedestrians had helped her in preventing the woman from making a second jump into the water. She was sent to hospital. — "China Mail" Photo.

Refugees told to leave North Point Camp

More than 150 refugees at present residing at the North Point Refugee Camp, run by the Hong Kong Government Social Welfare Office, have received official notices to leave the Camp, which is to be used for sick and pregnant women and the lame and disabled, the "China Mail" learned yesterday.

The notices received by the residents, who have been given a certain time within which they must vacate the Camp, read:

"As you are probably aware, the North Point Camp run by the Hong Kong Government Social Welfare Office exists solely for the purpose of giving temporary relief to destitute persons who have been here since you have been here since, and it is considered that the time for temporary relief granted to you should cease and so we regret to have to ask you to leave by..."

Most of these who received such notices were given until October 1, 1950. Others were given a much shorter period of time.

All the notices were received on August 28, the day after the Third Anniversary of the Camp.

A small number were given three days in which to leave while others were asked to leave by September 8 and others by September 18.

Applications for extension

Many who received notices to leave applied for an extension of time but all but one were refused.

One 18-year-old boy, who lost a leg through a fall when he was about six years of age, was given permission to go to the Camp at To Ka Ling.

Another person who was asked to leave was a 60-year-old man. He said that if forced out, he would have no place to go. He had been arrested before for sleeping on the streets and being a destitute.

If he had to leave he would have no means of earning a living and he would have to sleep in the streets.

When told he would be arrested again by the Police, the man merely shrugged his shoulders and said "Let them arrest me, what can I do?"

One woman refugee said that she had a young son to care for. She had been asked to leave by October 1. She said that her husband had died while defending the Colony and she had no one to care for her and her son. Yesterday she said that she would not know what to do as she has no friends or relatives in Hong Kong and no place to go to once she leaves the camp.

Big problem

A number of those asked to leave have friends or relatives to stay with for the time being but the big problem for one and all was how would they earn their daily bread?

A few of them have found employment in Hong Kong while others have been diligent and learnt a trade while staying at the Camp. They hope to put their training to use and earn a livelihood if and when they are asked to leave.

A Camp official said that most of those who have been requested to leave the Camp have been living there for more than a year. They had been allowed in the Camp to use them over until they could fend for themselves. However, they had made no attempt to fend for themselves and remained dependent on the Government for their daily food and lodging.

The Camp has a hospital and means of tending care of the sick which other camps have not. The reason for asking them to leave, apart from forcing the refugees to fend for themselves, is to make room for the sick and pregnant women, who are the neediest of soldiers at the To Ka Ling Camp, at which camp there are no facilities for tending sick and pregnant women.

It was learned that the Camp will be also used for housing the lame and disabled.

DECLARATION

DECLARATION is hereby made that owing to the uprising of cost due to the rapid increase of prices of all raw materials, it has been decided by a meeting held by this Association that from date the selling prices of all products of members of this association will temporarily be raised by ten percent on the recently revised price list as mentioned in our notice of August 18, 1950, so that our producing cost may be maintained; and it is also simultaneously decided that customers should pay a marginal deposit of twenty percent on selling price for orders to be placed with us in such a manner that prices for orders without contracts and deposits will be based on the prices fixed at time of delivery, whilst those with contract but without deposit will be adjusted by collecting such deposits

SPENDER SAYS:

NEW APPROACH NEEDED IN SE ASIAN AFFAIRS

London, September 4.
The Australian External Affairs Minister, Mr. Percy Spender, told a Press conference here today, "I think that there has got to be a new approach in South and South East Asia."
"It is essential that if the world is to have any enduring peace the factors of instability must be removed and I do not see any lasting peace for the world when any portion is existing on a standard of living which is sub-normal to the standards of Western civilisation."

RICE TALKS IN S'PORE

Singapore, September 4.
Eight South East Asian countries sat down to a two-day conference here today to discuss what measures could be taken to counteract the dangerous shortage of rice, staple diet for Asia's millions.

The British authorities, who called the conference to settle problems of supply and distribution of available stocks, said the situation was not desperate, but at the same time it was not easy. Representatives of the United States State Department and the Australian Government attended the talks as observers.

India, Ceylon, Indonesia, North Borneo, Hong Kong, Sarawak, Malaya and Singapore are represented.

A representative of Pakistan is expected to arrive tonight.

The talks began following General Douglas MacArthur's reported intention to buy 1,000,000 tons of rice for Japan, and Communist China's desire to enter the South East Asian rice market as a customer.

The conference, opened by the British Commissioner-General, Malcolm MacDonald, was held behind closed doors. No official statement was issued.—United Press.

Mr. Spender is on his way to New York to lead the Australian delegation to the United Nations Assembly.

Mr. Spender said that his talks with British Ministers had included European defence, Pacific pact, Formosa, and the Japanese peace treaty as well as the New Guinea question.

"I have received an understanding on all matters which I have put before the British Government," he said.

"I believe that there ought to be a European army which could be integrated under one command capable of being trained and employed as a permanent institution of European defence," he stated.

Mr. Spender said that the Western powers are likely to act soon on a Japanese peace treaty.

The agreed attitude of British Commonwealth countries on the subject of such a treaty, he said, is conditioned by two main factors:

1. They oppose "a state of peace" being brought about in Japan by "administrative actions".

He did not amplify but his idea was that the Japanese people ought to know what their obligations are and should be called upon to live up to them.

2. The sooner peace was formally established through a treaty, the better we will like it.

Mr. Spender, who leaves for the United States on September 7, added that in the Australian view, the treaty ought to be written with or without Russian participation.

He said in reply to a question that the problem of which Chinese government (Communist or Nationalist) should sit in on such a peace conference is also likely to be decided soon at the United Nations.

Mr. Spender has been having talks with the Prime Minister, Mr. Clement Attlee, the Foreign Secretary, Mr. Ernest Bevin, and other British Ministers.

Diplomatic officials in Washington and London have reported that the American, British and French Foreign Ministers take up the subject of a Japanese peace treaty when they meet in New York on September 12.

Mr. Spender said he intends pressing Australia's desire for an early treaty on the United States Government, although he added, "I do not think it will need much pressing."

In his talks with French, Dutch and British leaders during the past few weeks, Mr. Spender has been advocating a Pacific pact, but without any definite results.

Australia favoured such an alliance "with or without India, based first on Commonwealth countries in the Pacific and secondly on American participation"—Reuter and Associated Press.

Jehovah's Witnesses banned

Berlin, September 4.
The East German Government today banned the religious sect, "Jehovah's Witnesses," after the Soviet people's police had arrested more than 500 preachers and leading members of the sect last week.

Today's Government prohibition declared that the sect had misused its religious privileges to undertake "anti-State activities" and that the Witnesses were agents in the pay of an "imperialistic power."

Today's action by the Eastern Government was the culmination of a sustained propaganda and police attack against the sect, which has also been accused of not co-operating with the Communist-sponsored peace drive.

Herr Johannes Berger, the chief preacher of the Witnesses for East Germany, told Reuters here today: "Hundreds of Jehovah's Witnesses are fleeing daily into West Berlin from the Soviet Zone terror. Many more are on the way."

According to Herr Berger members of Jehovah's Witnesses in Magdeburg, in the Soviet Zone, tried to barricade themselves inside their "Bible House" but were ejected by the people's police and arrested.—Reuter.

Mr. Spender, who leaves for the United States on September 7, added that in the Australian view, the treaty ought to be written with or without Russian participation.

He said in reply to a question that the problem of which Chinese government (Communist or Nationalist) should sit in on such a peace conference is also likely to be decided soon at the United Nations.

Mr. Spender has been having talks with the Prime Minister, Mr. Clement Attlee, the Foreign Secretary, Mr. Ernest Bevin, and other British Ministers.

Diplomatic officials in Washington and London have reported that the American, British and French Foreign Ministers take up the subject of a Japanese peace treaty when they meet in New York on September 12.

Mr. Spender said he intends pressing Australia's desire for an early treaty on the United States Government, although he added, "I do not think it will need much pressing."

In his talks with French, Dutch and British leaders during the past few weeks, Mr. Spender has been advocating a Pacific pact, but without any definite results.

Australia favoured such an alliance "with or without India, based first on Commonwealth countries in the Pacific and secondly on American participation"—Reuter and Associated Press.

RUSSIA'S RAPID ADVANCE

Chicago, September 4.
The Chairman of the United States National Security Resources Board, Mr. W. Stuart Symington, said here tonight that Russia had made a rapid advance towards her goal of world conquest.

Mr. Symington, who is in charge of planning American industrial mobilisation in wartime, told a labour meeting: "The Soviets are steadily increasing the power of their own army, navy and air force, as well as their stockpile of atomic bombs, and the means to deliver the latter."

"With relatively minor exceptions, everything would now seem to be going according to their schedule for world conquest."

"Among the steps in the rapid advance they have made towards their ultimate goal are the following:

"1.—In the past 10 years the Communist or Communist-controlled peoples of the world have increased from some 168 million people to over 800 million people."

"2.—In nearly every country of importance in the world the Communists now have well-organised, well-trained and militant machinery, which takes maximum advantage of the tolerance of democratic Government."

"3.—Through clever, consistent and determined propaganda more people in the world now believe that Communism is a better form of Government for them than is Democracy."

"4.—The Soviets now have, outside their own country, millions of well-trained men organised of fight the battle for Communism."

"As a result, they can continue to bleed the Democracies without risking their own troops."

"To those who followed these developments over recent years, the grave danger of the current world situation is all too apparent. If Korea has taught us anything, it is that the peace-loving Democracies cannot afford to wait for an additional aggression before mobilising to meet that aggression."—Reuter.

"Vietminh alliance with Peking"

Paris, September 4.
The Paris branch of the French High Commission in Indo-China said today it has received proof of an alliance between the Russian-recognised Vietminh Insurrectionary Government and the Chinese Communist Government.

The High Commission representative gave as grounds for this assertion: Free gifts of Chinese arms to Vietminh;

The presence of a Chinese mission to Dr. Ho Chi-minh's Government.

The sending of Vietminh troops and labourers to South China near the Indo-Chinese border; and

The relief of the Chinese garrison of Young Hin (opposite Moncay) by a Vietminh detachment.—Reuter.

RETAN ROMANCE STIRS UNREST

Athens, September 4.
Unrest was reported today among the rival clans of the Cretan "Romeo", Constantine Kefaloghianis, and his 19-year-old "Juliet", Thassoula Petrakoglorghis, whose runaway love affair brought the island of Crete near to civil war.

They are said to be dissatisfied at the present state of affairs in which Constantine is in custody and Thassoula, the girl he "kidnapped", handed over to her husband's family.

Supporters of the girl's father are threatening to organise an armed mass meeting to protest against the authorities' forbidding Thassoula to meet her father.

SOUTH LOOK AND NORTH LOOK

China's skill in playing off one troublesome Power against another is traditional. Before the Communists came to power she also employed what may be called Fabian tactics to temper the cold wind to the shorn lamb. By these means, for example, she staved off the Japanese in North China for several years after Manchuria had been taken over. The old warlord General Sung Cheh-yuan was given virtually autonomous control of the Northern provinces. When pressure from the Kwangtung Army or from Nanking became too unbearable, he retired to his native village to sweep the tombs of his ancestors, leaving nobody in charge who possessed the power of decision. Exasperated Militarists likened the Northern glacies to a balloon in the futility to which it reduced prods and pressure.

It was a policy that owed its origin as much to the actual conditions and status of the region as to astute planning. It is far more difficult to employ such methods nowadays, because of the totalitarian nature of Communism and the powerful centralisation of policy. The division of the country into five great military and administrative areas could, of course, permit of substantial variations in policy. Such variations would have their origin as much in basic differences of outlook and interest as in mere regional administrative autonomy.

We have heard it argued that the old North-South division already exists in incipient form. The evidence of such a viewpoint is so far intangible. Yet it is perfectly true that if the Communists—who came from the interior and rose to power without aid, succour or any very obvious sympathy from the coast—look away from Peking to the vast land masses that stretch behind and beyond them, the Chinese of the Southern maritime provinces look to the Southern seas. Millions of them have relatives and business associations with the lands of the South. Most of their commerce is with them. Manchuria is as remote from their thinking as Sinkiang or Tibet.

The great centres of Chinese trade and settlement in Malaya, Indonesia, Borneo, and in Burma often mean a lot more to the people of Kwangtung, Fukien, Hainan, and the Hakka peoples along their borderlands than Hunan or even Kiangsi. From them come monthly huge remittances which enable them to overcome the successive trials and tribulations of a mainland in tumult and economic privation. The Chinese holdings and enterprises in these Southern areas mean far more to them even than Manchuria does to North China. A calamity would descend both upon them and upon their kin in the South Sea if China went to war. Overseas Chinese, said the mission of Chinese industrialists and merchants which Now London is for the first time thinking seriously about the long-term status of Korea.

Partly this is because the military position has for the first time suggested that victory in the campaign may not take as long as had been feared. Of course there is many a slip between cup and lip; the situation may have worsened again by the time this is printed. (It has—The Editor.)

Partly it is because the Security Council has been discussing how post-campaign Korea is to be governed. It is taken for granted in London that it would be useless to restore the political position as it existed before the crisis began. Suppose the North Koreans are driven back to the 38th Parallel. If North Korea remained a separate and heavily armed state, it might begin the attack on the South again immediately the United Nations Forces were withdrawn. To keep the peace the United Nations would have to keep permanently a large army in Korea. This is the last thing wished for.

Economically and ethnographically, a division of Korea into North and South is nonsense. Korea is a homogeneous state. Even since 1945 it has been supposed that there would be ultimate unification, in some form or other, until the Communists came at the end of the present campaign.

Simple proposals

The proposals made by South Korea are very simple. They are that they should simply annex the North. The South Korean government has always claimed that it is the right government of the whole country. It called South Korea "The Republic of Korea." It left vacant seats in its national assembly for representatives from North Korea. But this plan, though it has a certain logic about it, is not really acceptable. Unfortunately, the South Korean government, in the two years of its existence before it was invaded, earned a too unsavoury record to be regarded as a very desirable custodian of the whole country.

Feeling between North and South Koreans is exceedingly violent. This is understandable because of the passions roused by war. Terrible atrocities have been committed by both sides.

recently toured China, should be regarded as Chinese, not aliens, and receive considerate treatment.

A truly national policy, based wholly on China's national interests, clearly ought to be based on friendly relations with the West. But it is too much to hope, perhaps, that such a policy will be followed by a Government whose national outlook is dominated by its ideological beliefs. The Communist invariably puts his faith above national interests, and if he doesn't he gets thrown out. The examples are clear enough in Czechoslovakia and the other Satellite States. The one exception was Yugoslavia, which remains Communist but defies the Kremlin and repudiates the Cominform.

Perhaps the decisive factor in China's case is the mutual fear she shares with the Soviet Union of a resurgent Japan. That is in any case the basis of the Sino-Soviet alliance. It is also no doubt one of the restraining factors in regard to either Chinese or Russian armed intervention in Korea. For it is now almost certain that any such action would lead at once to the re-armament of Japan and her participation in the conflict on the side of the United Nations. Titism on a national scale is hardly a practicable policy at this juncture in China, though when the Korean aggressors have been overcome, and the country is unified under a national government elected by free vote, the entire strategic situation would change. Peking would be in a better position to develop an independent policy.

Meanwhile we see no reason at all why the authorities in Kwangtung and the Southern coastal provinces should not direct policy in more friendly channels so far as the West is concerned. That certainly is our own desire, and the desire of all Chinese with settled interests in the South Seas. The recent propaganda "blasts" are of no value to anybody. Nor is the refusal to entertain official relations except on very low levels, and by indirection. This attitude is also a distinct break with an almost unbroken tradition throughout the history of China. Years of the Revolution.

THE FUTURE OF KOREA

By "Windrush,"
Special correspondent

If the present South Korean government were allowed to take over the North, it would almost certainly be a step towards a state that they will be more successful by people who did not take part — actually in the field operations — in the overthrow, and accompanying devastation, of North Korea.

What, then, is the solution? Some kind of United Nations trusteeship seems absolutely necessary. There will have to be a period of administration by an outside agency while passions subside and while the attempt is made to work out a constitution acceptable in broad lines to both North and South. During this time there will have to be economic reconstruction; and the funds for this too will have to come from the United Nations. Relations with Russia will need the most skilful handling.

Keen interest

If all Korea is to be ruled for a time by a United Nations commission, probably it would be wise for the great powers in the UN to pass a self-denying ordinance, and to abstain from actual participation in the commission. They will naturally have the keenest interest in its work from the background, and through the Security Council, they would exercise the actual supervision over it.

But it would be best if American and British personnel were not actually enrolled in the Commission. The North Koreans will have vivid memories of the war. If they are to be won over to genuine collaboration in a new state, they will be more successful by people who did not take part — actually in the field operations — in the overthrow, and accompanying devastation, of North Korea. Abstention by the great powers would impress very favourably the smaller countries, especially those of Asia. Whether or not the events in Korea prove a turning point in world history, depends on whether the world comes to believe that, through the agency of the United Nations, international justice has been done. Success depends as much on the political handling when the campaign is over as on the military handling while the operations are continuing.

India, the largest of the Asian powers in the free world, has supported the United Nations in Korea unconditionally. (It dissociates itself from the American action in Formosa, but that is another matter.) India is thus willing to be convinced that the actions of the Security Council are inspired by the ideals which it proclaims. But there is also a keenly sceptical and watchful Indian public opinion.

If the end of the Korean fighting is simply military occupation of Korea by America and the great powers, it will say that after all the fighting was merely part of the struggle for Empire between Russia and the West. What India thinks will also be thought by most of free Asia and many of the secondary powers throughout the world.

Lines of thought

The discussion about the future of Korea in London have started also some interesting lines of thought about what went wrong with South Korea. The Communist Party line has been that South Korea was a monster among states, and that Dr. Syngman Rhee is fit only for the Chamber of Horrors. Nobody takes Communist propaganda too seriously. But it is known that South Korea was a very ornamental state. Why could America not have contrived to set up something better when it was in control at the end of the war?

It is easy to go on from this to light talk about American "reaction." The plain truth is that it is an exceedingly difficult operation to set up democratic government overnight in an oriental country which has had no experience of it, and where there is no Western middle class. There has been for half a century under the police rule of Japan. Freed from Japan, the state threatened to fall to pieces in anarchy. The new Korean government, lacking all the usual instruments of authority, fell back on the only sure tool at its hands, the police — which had been Japanese-trained. How can this be prevented from happening again? It will be for the United Nations to find an answer.

Men, women and memories

The star of the Roosevelt dynasty is again in the ascendant. Of the dozen names which will be submitted for nomination as Governor of New York State at the Convention today that of Mr. Franklin Roosevelt stands as favourite.

His health, which has led to the retirement of Governor Dewey to private law practice, and prompt Mayor William O'Dwyer to accept the Ambassadorship in Mexico, gives Franklin Roosevelt his chance. The gap in the Republican ranks caused by Mr. Dewey's departure greatly increases his prospect of election if he is nominated.

Franklin Roosevelt, who has the easy manner and handsome smile of his father, will, I learn, be sponsored by Mr. Oscar Ewing, an Indiana lawyer and probable choice as administrator of the Truman Health Plan.

The Hydrogen Bomb

There is a tendency in Britain to regard the hydrogen bomb and all the work on it as an exclusively American project. But Britain's contribution has been considerable, and Sir John Cockcroft, Director of the Harwell Atomic establishment, deserves perhaps more credit than anyone.

Sir John, one of the least communicative scientists on atomic matters, will forgive me for drawing attention to a paper presented to the Royal Society on April 26, 1932. It was by Lord Rutherford, who said that two of the outstanding workers in the Cavendish Laboratory had successfully disintegrated the nuclei of lithium, the light element near hydrogen.

The workers, almost unknown then, were J. D. Cockcroft and E. S. Walton. Their experiments, together with the subsequent discovery of the positron and the neutron, made 1932 a memorable year in scientific history. It is ironic to reflect that Sir John was at that time thought to be of much practical importance.

Research in Spain

The recently appointed Director of the British Museum, Mr. T. D. Kendrick, is best known as an authority on the archaeology and early art of Britain. But his researches, which deal amusingly as well as learnedly, with our forefathers' often unscientific view of their own past.

Mr. Kendrick is working, he tells me, on the continental counterpart of his recent "British Antiquities," which dealt amusingly as well as learnedly, with our forefathers' often unscientific view of their own past.

The medieval and Renaissance Englishman liked to think he was descended from a hero either of the Old Testament, or of Virgil, and other countries, too, have their fabulous founders.

Mr. Kendrick is specially interested in Tubal and the early mythical kings of Spain. He is intrigued too by such ancient religious controversies as the historical authenticity of St. James's mission and the dispute which followed the discovery of the lead books of Granada, which he visited last year. This time he goes to Santiago.

Old Noll's bottles

The Lord Great Chamberlain has again given permission to the Cromwell Association to hold a meeting beneath Cromwell's statue outside the House of Parliament. A service will start at three o'clock next Sunday — the hour when the Lord Protector expired.

President of this Association, whose aim is to safeguard Cromwell's memory, is Mr. Isaac Foot. Energetic members of the Council are Mr. David Renton, M.P. for

By Atticus

Huntingdon, where Cromwell was born; Lord Hinchinbrooke, in whose house a Cromwell museum is now open to the public; and Alderman C. L. Ackroyd, who may well be next Lord Mayor of London.

Until the Association began its work the sites of neither the battles of Dunbar nor Worcester were marked. A big stone has now been placed on the Berwick road near the place where Cromwell delivered his flank attack at Dunbar.

Metamorphosis

Back in London after his remarkable annual metamorphosis is Mr. Peter Fleming. Each year in August or September this ex-Grenadier Colonel leaves his red hat at home, disguises himself modestly as a Territorial subaltern, and reports for duty as Lieutenant Fleming, Intelligence Officer of the 4th Battalion, the Oxfordshire and Buckinghamshire Light Infantry.

In his civilian capacity he is busier than ever on "The Spectator," owing to Mr. Wilson Harris's sudden illness. And Mr. Fleming's weekly assessment of the situation in Korea is attracting wide attention, not least in America. Even the critical Mr. Walter Lippmann has quoted these commentaries with approval.

Incidentally, Lieutenant Fleming's C.O., Colonel "Pip" Ward, the former Olympic athlete, was much distressed when his Intelligence Officer was called to London one wet day recently on urgent civilian business.

"There goes my wet weather programme," he observed, ruefully. For Colonel, Lieutenant or Mr. Fleming, Lecturer, is fully equal to keeping a battalion interested and amused on his own.

Grouse and whisky

My prediction that grouse would be plentiful this year has been fulfilled. In spite of the shortage of good guns bags show a welcome increase, and as far as Scotland is concerned, Colonel Oliver Haig of Inchreay once again heads the list with a total of 1,030½ brace for five days' shooting over dogs from the Twelfth onwards.

The Haigs have a long connection with sport, war and whisky, and the greatest example of this was the Field-Marshal of the first world war.

Although born in Edinburgh, he was brought up in his father's distillery, at Cameron Bridge in Fifehire, spent his holidays and "leaves" there both as a school boy and as an officer, and became one of the first directors and eventually chairman of John Haig & Co.

Indeed, the Haig connection with whisky is probably the oldest in the world, for on January 4, 1605, Robert, second son of the 17th Laird of Benmergady, was summoned to appear before the Session of the High Court of Justiciary in Edinburgh for working his still on the Sabbath. He pleaded not guilty and, as it appeared that the culprit was a servant less who had been making a "puck of two for himself," he escaped, "upon engagement of Christian's carriage for the future," with a rebuke.

Festival spirit

There is a brave flourish about cricket's dying days. Last week the tents and uttering flags brightened Festival grounds. And the bands play. At Scarborough — sixes were hit once again in the stirring strains of "Finchford" and the "Eton Boating Song."

On lesser grounds, too, cricket has a festival air. I hear of a great game on the Dripping Pan at Lewes, where John Wisden's XI will be challenged by Sir John Squire's Invalids on Sunday. In a game to round off celebration of Wisden's centenary.

Sir John founded the Invalids in 1910, and he is still their captain. I doubt if he has missed half a dozen matches in a quarter of a century.

Captain's innings

On one famous occasion in the club's history only Sir John Squire and one other player turned up in time for a morning start; the rest of the Invalids were under the impression that the game was to begin in the afternoon.

Fortunately, Sir John won the toss. He opened the innings with his only available companion, and they were still together when the rest of the Invalids arrived at lunch time. Sir John had two had scored 60. Sir John had contributed a masterly 60 not out!

Since the war the Invalids have had in their ranks writers, actors, lawyers, and doctors; an Air Marshal, an Opera singer who folded in a beret, and a Polish almanac who had never seen, much less played, cricket.

I am told that once the umpire had placed him in position, facing the right way, the batsman from Poland thoroughly enjoyed his innings!

RUSSIA EXPECTED TO VETO AMERICAN RESOLUTION IN UN

Lake Success, September 4.

Russia is expected to use her veto on Tuesday to block passage by the Security Council of the American resolution demanding that all United Nations members refrain from assisting or encouraging the North Koreans.

The resolution was introduced by Mr. Warren Austin, chief American delegate, on July 31, the day before Mr. Jacob Malik of Russia began his month of propaganda obstruction of the Korea war effort as President of the Security Council.

Throughout August, Mr. Malik successfully prevented the 11-nation group from considering the American measure, which was the first order of business before the Council.

TAA MEN TELL STORY

Rangoon, September 4.

Mr. Francis James McGowan, one of the crew of five of a Trans-Asiatic Airlines plane detained by Chinese Communists for eight and a half months, today described his experiences.

The crew flew their plane to Kunming to evacuate refugees fleeing before the advancing Communist armies, but landed after the airport had fallen into Communist hands.

Mr. McGowan said in an interview that, for the first six months, he and his comrades were allowed to go where they liked in Kunming as long as they did not try to leave the city.

They were confined to one room in the police headquarters, but were allowed to get their food from the British Consulate. Two and a half months later they were allowed to leave Kunming under an armed escort provided by 11 Communist soldiers.

The party travelled the 2,000 miles to the Chinese-Burmese border in eight days in a char-coal-burning truck. There, the escorts photographed the plane crew crossing the border into Burma, and gave them 200 rupees for immediate expenses.

Mr. McGowan, his co-pilot, Mr. Darcel D. Carden, and two Filipino members of the crew are flying to Manila. The fifth member of the crew, Mr. A. V. Ozorio, the company's traffic manager, is flying to Hong Kong to join his family.—Reuter.

Pontiff's message to young workers

Vatican City, September 4.

Pope Pius in a radio address today urged young Christian workers to be apostles for Christ in labour's ranks.

The Pope spoke to more than 100,000 working youths from 50 nations gathered in Brussels to celebrate the 25th anniversary of their organization. His words, however, were directed to Catholic youth in general.

The Pope warned his listeners not to make "an error that is too diffused, unfortunately even among Catholics; the classification of souls in categories." "There are not," he said, "two categories of men—workers and non-workers. To think thus is to delude oneself about the actual aspect of the social question and show an intellectual myopia unworthy of a Catholic."

The Pope, without mentioning Communism by name, said that materialists today strive to give a cultural aspect to the "war of the classes."

Young Christian workers, therefore, he said, "must be vigilant because the spheres which occupy themselves with the worker's world from a cultural point of view represent the concept of a purely worldly life outside religion and the Church."

But this situation, added the Pope, "is also a favourable decision for your success."

"Only one tie unites the worker with the spiritual world and that is his religious basis."

"Awakening it is the only way to lift him above vulgar materialism and utilitarianism. That is the task that the Lord entrusts to you."—Associated Press.

Korean war just opening skirmish

Chicago, September 4. Mr. William Green, President of the American Federation of Labour, said in a speech today that the Korean war was merely the opening skirmish of a global struggle which may break out into open warfare at any time.

He told a Labour Day rally that "Korea gave us the warning and the opportunity to get ready for any serious contingency of the future."

"Our army of production at home must stand and fight with the military forces abroad until the victory over Communism and totalitarianism is decisively won," he said.—Reuter.

GERMAN MINISTER RESIGNS

Bonn, September 4.

The West German Minister of the Interior, Dr. Gustav Heinemann, has tendered his resignation as a protest against the Federal Chancellor, Dr. Konrad Adenauer, keeping him and other members of the Cabinet in the dark over his security policy.

According to political circles here Dr. Heinemann is receiving support from three other Ministers, Herr Jakob Kaiser (All-German Affairs), Dr. Thomas Heilmann (Justice) and Herr Eberhard Wildermuth (Housing).

Today, the Chancellor and the Minister of the Interior had a long discussion over their differences. The meeting is to continue tomorrow.

From the standpoint of the stability of Dr. Adenauer's Coalition Government, political circles regard it as absolutely necessary that Dr. Heinemann should remain in the Government particularly as he is its leading Protestant member.

Dr. Heinemann, a Chairman of the Evangelical Church Council, has a large following in the country and especially in Eastern Germany and Berlin.

It has been an open secret that Ministers were notified by the Chancellor's action in ignoring them when framing his security policy asking for a Federal protective police equal to the East zone's People's Police.—Reuter.

AIR MARSHAL'S WARNING

Norfolk, September 4.

Britain's fighter plane chief said today that blind flying in the Royal Air Force "is not up to the standard which we need to defend our country in time of war."

Air Marshal Sir Basil Embury, Commander-in-Chief of the RAF Fighter Command, made his comment in presenting a trophy for instrument flying to Squadron No. 74. The trophy is offered by General Gervase Duncan, Chief-of-Staff of the Brazilian Air Force.

"I hope this competition will succeed in raising the standard of instrument flying," said Sir Basil.

"Our fighter squadrons cannot be a fair weather force. They must be prepared to fight under the worst conditions."—Associated Press.

GENERAL SMUTS

Pretoria, September 4.

General Smuts left his farm at Irene today for the first time since he fell ill just after his 80th birthday three months ago. A bulletin issued yesterday said that the recent influenza attack had left a depression which lasted longer than usual. "Heart strain has reappeared and the General must be kept quiet," it said.—Reuter.

TYPHOON JANE BRINGS HAVOC TO JAPAN

Tokyo, September 4.

Typhoon "Jane" killed at least 250 people in Western Japan and made more than 250,000 people homeless.

Figures released today by the National Rural Police Headquarters were still incomplete but they indicated the extent of the damage and casualties caused by "Jane", the worst gale to hit Western Japan in 16 years.

The densely populated Osaka, Kobe and Kyoto area received the full impact of winds which reached a maximum of 108 miles an hour.

The police reported that nearly 12,000 houses were totally destroyed, 22,000 partially destroyed and more than 170,000 flooded. Seven hundred ships were reported to have been destroyed or damaged.

The Government despatched four Cabinet Ministers to the scenes of disaster which covered 16 of Japan's 48 prefectures. Vice-Ministers in conference today decided to disburse from the National Treasury 55,000,000 yen ($25,000) for emergency relief of the stricken areas.

It is a Japanese custom to give girls' names to typhoons.

Piecemeal reports here from various localities indicated that the final assessment of the damage done by the typhoon will be enormous.

Irreparable losses

The Telecommunications Ministry estimated that the damage to telephones and telegraph facilities in the Osaka district amounted to 600,000,000 yen ($200,000).

Irreparable losses to national treasures included the destruction of the 700-year-old Taoto Pagoda in Wakayama.

The Golden Pavilion of the Osaka Tennoji was also destroyed.

In Kyoto the Sakata Pavilion, in the former Imperial Palace, was crushed by a falling tree.

The headquarters here of the American Relief Organisation has already despatched sufficient clothing for thousands of victims. In the coastal prefecture of Toyama the authorities estimated that the damage done to food resources alone amounted to 205,000,000 yen.

The biggest shipping loss was the 6,345-ton Tatsu Maru which broke away from its moorings, smashed into a dry-dock and sank with a large hole on the port side. This happened on the day the ship was due to leave Kobe harbour for the United States.—Reuter.

CAIRO PAPER ACCUSES ISRAEL

Cairo, September 4.

The newspaper "Almisry" today quoted reliable sources as reporting that Israel has driven more than 2,000 Arabs from their homes in Jewish-held Palestine territory.

The report claimed that Israel troops drove out the unarmed Arabs with machine-guns, and pursued them to the Egyptian border.

It added that the Arabs on Sunday took refuge in a village 40 kilometres within Egyptian territory, in Sinai.

The paper also accused the Israelis of using coercion in order to convert Moslem and Christian Palestine Arabs to the Jewish religion.

Later in Alexandria, the War Minister, Mustafa Nosrat Bey, confirmed the report, adding: "Egypt will ask the United Nations to check these savage acts of aggression, otherwise Egypt will free the bindings of her truce with Israel."—United Press.

CABINET TALKS ON DEFENCE

London, September 4.

The Prime Minister, Mr. Clement Attlee, called his Service Ministers and Chiefs of Staff to a Cabinet meeting today to discuss the fighting in Korea and West German security.

Also on the agenda was the final briefing for the Foreign Secretary, Mr. Ernest Bevin, before he leaves on Thursday for the Foreign Ministers' conference at New York.

Mr. Bevin arrived at today's Cabinet meeting leaning heavily on a stick.

One question before the Cabinet was the problem of German rearmament and the possible need to station more British divisions on the Continent.

Two more Cabinet meetings will be held later this week, one on Wednesday and one on Thursday.

At them, Mr. Attlee and his Ministers will consider the programme for Parliament's special session which begins next Tuesday.

Defence will be the principal theme of the session, with the Government expected to elaborate its plans in some detail.

A bill extending National Service in the armed forces from 18 months to two years is likely to be hurried through without opposition. But Conservative Opposition leaders will meet later this week to decide whether to table a vote of censure on the Government's handling of defence and foreign affairs.—Reuter.

GERMANS CAN NOW HAVE SHOTGUNS

Frankfurt, September 4.

The Allied Military Security Board today lifted restrictions on hunting rifles and shotguns for Germans. It informed the German Ministry of Economics that it would permit the use of up to 25,000 rifles and 50,000 shotguns for the present hunting season. The rifles are limited to five rounds capacity and eight millimetre calibre and 12-gauge shotguns are the largest permitted.

Pistols, revolvers and semi-automatic weapons are still forbidden by the Allied High Commission.—United Press.

BRUSH-UP FOR BEAUTY

By Carolyn Earle

As a beauty-aid the brush has so caught popular fancy that now-a-days it is considered smart to keep a special brush for grooming the skin, as well as for the hair, teeth, nails, and putting the final finish to lip and eye make-up. A complexion brush is a beauty utensil that cannot be overrated for special cases. Skin brushing will scale off dead particles, stir up circulation to a rosy glow, and bring finer texture to skin wherever it has taken on a rough and darkish appearance.

The shoulders, back, upper arms, the kneecaps, and backs of the heels are potential treatment areas.

You can usually make goose-pimples on the back and arms disappear by scrubbing gently with soap and brush, followed by lots of hand lotion. If results are not all they might be, substitute a palmful of salt over the skin while it is wet.

Use a brush with soft bristles, with one of the emulsion soaps, or lathered soap, with the deep, rotary motion that is so important in clearing up an under-par complexion.

An oily skin and a spotty complexion are often a teenage misery. If you are a victim of spots and lifeless-looking skin, remember that cleanliness is an important factor in clearing it up. Cleanliness not only of the face, but of the hands, and any article with which contact is made.

Another good external treatment is the nightly application of cleansing grains in a granular preparation that dissolves to paste and cleans while it stimulates the blood supply—to carry off 'under-surface' poisons.

To say the hairbrush has a big job probably sounds like a Greek chorus, it's been repeated so often, but it is true for all that.

speckless, and for sleek upkeep carry a silver of brush in the handbag to brush, rather than comb, the hair-do into place.

Tooth care

Dentists love to tell you the way to use a toothbrush. If you want to hang on to your teeth through middle-age it's well worth fussing about the brushes you use and the technique employed, for the majority of people do not remove all food particles even when they scrub their teeth.

Two firm brushes are better than one, should be rinsed carefully in cold water after each use, and hung up to dry.

A brush should reach all surfaces of the teeth and get between the spaces as well for thorough clearance. Another brief routine to add to regular brush drill concerns the use of those toothpick-like cleaners (any chemist has them).

The flat edge is inserted between the teeth and pressed against the gum until it whitens. Release, let the blood come back, then press again all around the upper and lower jaws between each pair of teeth.

This is given as one of the best methods to help maintain circulation, keep gums healthy, and defeat decay of the teeth.

Two rules

The two rules for healthy hair are (1) good circulation and (2) cleanliness. Brushing and scalp massage each day plus a shampoo at ten-to-fourteen day intervals are usually enough to keep a normal head of hair in top condition.

Make a point of parting your hair in several places and brush it, step by step, all over. Then brush outward from the scalp, drawing the hair out to its full length in all directions, on first one side and then the other, of each strand of hair.

Finally brush your hair into the lines of your hair-style, flourishing its curls and pressing in the waves with the fingers. It is not considered the most rewarding idea to wash the hair when you have a case of winter sniffles.

As an emergency measure you can give yourself a dry shampoo, though, by parting your hair all over and shaking talcum powder into the partings, then brush solidly. The powder will absorb dust and oil, make the locks look clean and fluffy.

But you must be sure to remove all powder traces, otherwise it will blur the natural hair steen, and that's just as irritating as end-of-shampoo dullness.

And, by the way, to get maximum comfort with the minimum effort from your short hair-do, see to it that your hair is parted off in the way that comes naturally to it.

The "good" side for a parting depends on the direction in which it swirls around the crown of the head, as any hairdresser will confirm. Follow the direction of swirl and your hair will stay put longer and be much easier to handle.

Recognizing that a hairbrush is a long-lasting beauty treat, have at least two, and alternate them so that one is always

Cheese onion pie

Reffuted: 1½ cups unweakened biscuit crumbs, ½ cup and 1 tablespoon melted butter or margarine, 2½ cups thinly sliced onions, 1½ cups scalded milk, 2 eggs slightly beaten (or reconstituted), 1 teaspoon salt ¾ teaspoon pepper, ½ lb. finely shredded cheese ("mousetrap" kind will do).

Neck and shoulders

By Sally Young

Under the sun—under the moon, your neck and shoulders are the focal point for all eyes this summer.

1—Scrub neck and shoulders daily. Draw a warm bath, add your favourite bath product and soak for at least 10 minutes. Put plenty of soap on a long-handled back brush and scrub.

2—If you are bothered with pimples on your back, a cleansing meal used once or twice a week may help dry them up.

After your bath rub hard with a Turkish towel. If your skin is oily, dust yourself with powder or apply a little rubbing alcohol. Then spray on your favourite cologne or toilet water.

If very dry, you should have put a bath oil in your tub and perhaps follow that up with a perfumed body oil or baby lotion.

3—Going swimming? Not unprotected, I hope! Suntan lotions and creams—many of which have new formulas for better protection—should be used liberally to keep skin smooth. No drying, burning and flaking for lovely shoulders.

4—For evening, wear a make-up foundation clear from your hairline to your dress line.

5—Watch your posture. If your neck and shoulders are tense, relax them with exercise and massage.

Place your hands at the base of your neck and manipulate with your fingers.

Another relaxer: head back, push shoulders back and up. Hold a few seconds and repeat.

AMERICAN DELEGATE ADDRESSES THE TUC

Brighton, September 4.

"The United States would not hesitate to cross the Atlantic and the Pacific to defend Democracy when it was endangered and assaulted by the new totalitarian foe of freedom and Democracy—Soviet Russia," Mr. Alex Rose, the New York Trade Union and Liberal Party leader, told the annual Conference of Britain's Trade Union Congress here today. Speaking as a fraternal delegate from the American Federation of Labour, Mr. Rose told the Congress that, for the first time, it was America which fought first—in Korea—instead of coming in later.

SECURITY MEASURES IN UK

Liverpool, September 4.

The Cunard Steamship Company has banned all visitors to the giant liners, the Queen Elizabeth and the Queen Mary, at Southampton as part of Britain's latest efforts to tighten up security measures in docks and harbours.

This step follows hard on the heels of Admiralty moves overhauling security machinery in naval establishments, where there have been a number of cases of suspected sabotage involving warships.

In the case of the two giant liners, which acted as troop carriers between Britain and the United States in World War II, passes already held by officials are being carefully checked.

New applications for passes will be screened. Friends and relations seeing passengers off from either of the liners will have to apply for a dock permit. They will be allowed no further than the customs barrier.

Other shipping lines are also tightening up on security measures.

A spokesman of the Royal Mail Steamship Company said: "We have made a number of new security regulations."—Reuter.

Major battles expected in Indo-China

London, September 4.

General Vo Nguyen Giap, Commander of the Vietnamese Army in Indo-China, has told his men to prepare for major battles in the autumn and winter, the New China News Agency reported today, quoting the Vietnamese Radio.

The General ordered stiffer action on all fronts "to shatter the enemy's autumn and winter offensive plans, and to speed up the development and consolidation of guerrilla warfare."—Reuter.

"Imperialism over"

The heckling became so vehement at one point that the Chairman interjected the comment that the interrupter was a non-delegate and asked the stewards to throw him out.

A number of stewards gathered around the man, argued with him, and then let him remain. He made no further comment.

But at the end of Mr. Rose's speech, booing about equalled the volume of applause from the 915 delegates—representatives of almost 8,000,000 British workers.

Mr. Rose told the Congress: "The time for swagger-buff diplomacy and imperialist politics in Asia is over."—Reuter and Associated Press.

DEFENCE MEASURES IN WEST EUROPE ARE INSUFFICIENT

Much yet to be done by Atlantic Pact nations

London, September 4.

The North Atlantic Deputies' Council today declared that the defence efforts of member governments so far proposed were insufficient and that further effort and sacrifice will be required.

In a communique issued to conclude the recent series of meetings in London, the Deputies said that they had examined the reports submitted by the member governments of their proposed increased defence efforts.

"They found that much remains to be done and that further effort and sacrifice will be required," the communique said. "Nevertheless, the Deputies were encouraged by the steps being taken by member governments and the determination evidenced by these steps to strengthen the defence of the West."

The communique, opened by saying "The North Atlantic Council Deputies on Saturday afternoon September 13, 1950, when they will convene in New York prior to the meeting of the North Atlantic Council."

The Council Deputies drew up plans to implement and finance a priority production programme and recommended to their governments its immediate placing of orders up to the full utilisation of existing capacity for certain specified items of equipment most urgently required for the approved defence plan. This priority programme will be embodied in future long-term plans for the production and financing of military equipment.

"The Deputies inaugurated an urgent study with the assistance of the appropriate agencies of the North Atlantic treaty, of the measures required, first, to strengthen the military organisation of the treaty and, second, to decide what arrangements would bring about a fair distribution of the financial burden and the most effective and economic use of the collective resources of the 12 countries for the defence of the North Atlantic area."

Progress made

Mr. Charles Spofford, American Chairman of the North Atlantic Deputies, told a Press conference after the communique was released that he was left with the impression of progress from the meeting which had just adjourned.

This progress, he said, had consisted in getting first things done first and in setting up the necessary machinery to achieve this.

The Deputies, he recalled, had to deal at the same time with a long-term and a short-term problem.

He thought that they had succeeded in not letting long-term considerations interfere with their immediate recommendations for urgent action nor had the immediate tasks been allowed to make them neglect getting started at once with preparations for the long-term aspects of their task of defence.

Mr. Spofford said that where the high priority production programme was being used by the producing countries, it had been agreed that it should be financed from their own resources with assistance from the United States where it was judged essential and equitable.

In reply to a question, Mr. Spofford denied that the statement in the Deputies' communique that "further effort and sacrifice" would be required of member governments implied any specific criticism of the proposed defence programmes of any particular government.

Social services

Asked whether the increased effort and sacrifice referred to would entrench upon the programme of social services of the countries concerned he said that it was desired to protect the standard of living of the North Atlantic treaty countries.

Mr. Spofford said that the problem of the revised defence programme implying on social services had been seriously considered. He agreed that the new programme might mean that the rate of improvement in social services might be retarded.

Mr. Spofford stated that the Deputies had not discussed the question of the number of British and American divisions which might be sent to Germany or the question of the creation of a West German police force or the possibility of bringing West German production into the defence production programme of the North Atlantic countries.

Mr. Spofford carefully evaded his questioners when pressed to say how far short of eventual requirements the existing proposed defence programmes of the Atlantic Treaty governments now were.

He thought that the reports submitted by President Truman last August had to be considered in the light of developing policy.

Supreme commander

He agreed that he had in mind the recent decisions of Britain, France and Belgium to extend the length of military service and indicated that an announcement of the same kind was to be expected from Canada.

Mr. Spofford said that the Deputies had inaugurated the urgent study of the military organisation of the North Atlantic treaty to which the communique refers without first discussing the future military set-up of the Treaty powers.

But, pressed by vigorous questioners, he admitted that terms of reference had been given to the organs which are to conduct the study of the Treaty's military organisation.

Asked whether the desirability of appointing a Supreme Commander for the North Atlantic area fell within their scope he said sharply, "I can't comment on that."

He refused to give any indication whether the merging of the military organisation of Western Union with that of the North Atlantic Treaty's military organisation was within the scope of the study recently inaugurated by the Deputies.

U.S. aid

In reply to a further question Mr. Spofford said that the amount of appropriated aid made available in total by the American Government at the present time was already known.

The Deputies had not reached agreement on the allocation of this aid but indicated that it would take the form of machine-tools and raw materials for countries engaging in the high priority arms production programme.

In answer to another question he indicated that a main task of the study group set up by the Deputies and due to continue work in London would be to fix definite commitments for countries receiving this aid on the understanding that they themselves would supply their European neighbours under the new production programme.—Reuter.

Discordant note in Canada

Ottawa, September 4.

An Independent French-Canadian member of Canada's Parliament, Mr. P. E. Gagnon, of Chicoutimi, Quebec, said today that large numbers of Canadian fathers and mothers were ready to sacrifice their sons in defence of Canada but not of Korea.

Addressing the Canadian House of Commons, he said that a large section of the Canadian population was opposed to Canadian participation in the Korea war.

A Canadian force for Korea was being raised by voluntary enlistment, he said, but experience had shown that this was a prelude to conscription.

He asked if it was necessary for Canada to do more than, for instance, India or the countries of South America.

Canada was helping the South Koreans in a civil war to upset a Communist Government, but was turning her back on Spain, a bastion against Communism.

Mr. Gagnon spoke during the debate on the Address in reply to the Speech from the Throne.

On Saturday, another French-Canadian Independent, Dr. Raoul Poulin, opposed the despatch of a Canadian force to Korea.—Reuter.

German General's warning on Europe defence

Washington, September 4.

Colonel-General Heinz Guderian, Hitler's tank expert, wrote today that only all-armed defence forces would have a chance of stopping a Russian invasion of Western Europe.
The Occupation forces in Germany, as now constituted, could not stop the Russians before the Rhine or even before the Channel, he said.

General Guderian's views were contained in a copyrighted interview published today in the United States News and World Report, an independent weekly magazine.

"For reasons of security," General Guderian stated, "the Western Powers, chiefly those on the Continent, are inclined to think of using Germans either in partisan warfare, as guerrillas, or light-armed infantrymen. Both of these ideas are, of course,
complete nonsense."

"A light-armed infantry can never stop a mobile invasion from the East. Only all-armed mobile forces would have a chance."

If Germans were to be integrated in the defence of Western Europe, they would have to have equal rights in every respect,
General Guderian said.

The Russian soldier

The Germans should operate under a German Command and, like other nations, Germany, too, must have a commander in Fontainebleau (the regional military headquarters for the Atlantic Pact).
He suggested the former Field Marshal Erich von Manstein.
He would like to limit every European country to manufacturing just one special kind of arms.

In this way, he declared, no nation would need to be afraid of another nation striving for control of Europe.

General Guderian warned against under-estimating the Russian soldier.
"The Russians are excellent, easily satisfied, enduring and thorough, and hard-fighting soldiers, and it would be the greatest danger to under-estimate their strength as Hitler did.
"They learned very much in the last war, and they are fighting for an idea in which they sincerely believe.
"Nothing but technical superiority is likely to defeat them."—Reuter.

GOODWILL NEEDED

Lake Success, September 4.
The chief Yugoslav delegate to the United Nations, Dr. Ales Bebler, said here today that goodwill was needed to improve Greek-Yugoslav relations.
"There is goodwill on our side," he said, "but last month there was a lack of goodwill on the Greek side."—Reuter.

London, September 4.

The three-power Study Group on the future of Germany tonight concluded the first stage of its work by issuing a communique which announced that it has agreed on its report for submission to the three Western Foreign Ministers in New York in the middle of this month.—Reuter.

British Council report

London, September 4.

The British Council's report,
published here today, attacks
"attempts in Iron Curtain countries to bring fictitious political charges against the Council and to stifle its work."

The Council is a Government-supported organisation to extend cultural relations abroad.

The report said that in China
the Council's work continued without serious interruption after the Communist occupation and in Nanking it had actually increased.

East German Governments have harassed the Council.
The people—professors to peosants—have shown nothing but friendliness, it said.

Last year the Council spent £2,853,758 out of the £3,161,500
voted by Parliament.

The report said that aim of the Council is neighbourly understanding.—Reuter.

Bombs thrown at Maltese leader

Valetta, September 4.

Two petrol bombs exploded near the motor-car of the right wing Constitutional Party candidate, Dr. Paul Mallia, after he had visited General Election polling stations in Pawla, near here, today.

Five men were arrested in Pawla on Saturday after an attempt to horse-whip the left wing Labour leader, Dominic Mintoff, there.

This was the last day for polling
in the three-day Malta General Election.

During the week-end rival party supporters toured the island's main roads, showering party literature on streets and pavements.

Malta's keenly-contested general election—necessitated by the defect of Dr. Paul Boffa's Labour Government last June on a motion to consider the 1950-51 budget, ended with 74 per cent of the electorate going to the polls.
Polling in the dockyard area was the highest ever recorded.

Results of the first count are expected on Wednesday.
The leader of Malta's Labour Party, Mr. Don Mintoff, leaves on Tuesday morning for a short Swiss holiday with his English wife and their child.—Reuter and Associated

HMS Ocean returning to Far East

London, September 4.
The 19,190-ton aircraft
carrier, HMS Ocean, will shortly leave Britain with further reinforcements for the Far East, the Admiralty said tonight.

HMS Ocean, commanded by Captain R.C.V. Ross, returned here from the Far East about six weeks ago.
"She will be used in service as a naval troop carrier," an Admiralty spokesman said.
"On her return to the Far East she will be carrying both men and supplies as before."

Included in Ocean's cargo on her next voyage out will be a number of small assault craft, which will be used on patrol work in Malayan waters. Earlier naval reinforcements were sent in the aircraft carrier Warrior, a similar type of craft.—Reu-

OMINOUS SIGNS OF TROUBLE IN GREECE

Washington, September 4.

The United States is keeping a close watch on ominous signs that the Greek Communists and guerrillas behind the Iron Curtain are plotting new trouble for Greece.
Reports received here indicate that the Communists are trying to recover from the military defeat
they suffered in the mountains near the Greek-satellite borders. Official sources said the Communist efforts were directed primarily at infiltration of Greek trade unions and the Greek armed forces.

Party organization campaigns are well under way and the clandestine "Free Greek" radio station is spreading war propaganda.

Moscow has also opened a new propaganda drive against the "monarchist-Fascist" rulers in Athens.

The authorities said these signs showed that Communist organizations, the Cominform, the satellites and Russia itself, had not abandoned hope of dominating Greece. Communist guerrillas quit fighting the American-backed Greek Government troops while they still had the nucleus of a military force. The Communists might start fighting again if they could count on support from nearby Cominform countries.

The existence of this guerrilla force was confirmed last week by the clandestine radio station, which said: "The democratic army of Greece preserved the bulk of its forces and is simply standing at present."

American strategy is to maintain and if possible to increase the living standard in Greece.
This is being done in co-operation with the Greek Government.
Greater internal security measures are also expected to be recommended by John Peurifoy, now United States Ambassador to Greece, who arrives in Athens at the end of this month and who will take charge of the American economic and military aid programmes.

Efficient army

American officials have confidence in the desire and ability of the Greek armed forces to fight the Communists again.
Man for man, the Greeks are believed to have one of the best-trained armies in non-Communist Europe.
Strategists believe their equipment is superior to that of the Yugoslav armed forces, generally regarded as one of Europe's most efficiently equipped.

The authorities here have been watching propaganda broadcasts
by the clandestine Greek radio station as a very important indication of Communist plans for Red youths to infiltrate the Greek armed forces. The radio said work in the army was the "primary duty of everybody."

"It is an imperative revolutionary obligation for everybody," it said. "The army is part of the people and the people will win it over to their side. We have been asked what recruits must do in the army. Must they sign statements and thus throw dust in the enemy's eyes while in reality continuing their people's revolutionary work."—United Press.

CRA questionnaire on constitutional reform

The Hong Kong Chinese Reform Association is at present circulating the public with a series of 70 questions to which it requests answers. The "China Mail" will publish one question each day, with notes provided by the CRA in the form of background information.

Publication of the notes does not necessarily mean approval by the "China Mail" of the views expressed therein.

Question no. 1:

Sir Mark Young on May 1, 1946 promised to give "the inhabitants of Hong Kong a greater share in the management of their own affairs" by creating a Municipal Council with their own elected representatives. Are you in favour of such Constitutional Reform?

The first concrete suggestion of Constitutional Reform was made when the Civil Government took over from the Military Administration with the proclamation on resumption of Government by Sir Mark Young on May 1, 1946, which emphasised that his return was to "convey" and "implement" the Government's promise to "grant the inhabitants of Hong Kong a greater share in the management of their own affairs and the promotion of self-government."

Later he broadcast an invitation for the expression of public opinion towards the creation of a Municipal Council. His plan was finalised in the Municipal Council Ordinance, which scheduled the creation of the Municipal Council, enlargement of the present Legislative Council by the nomination of three members, and the appointment of three members to the Municipal Council.

The Ordinance received the approval of the Colonial Office as published in the "Lancet" on May 1, 1946. The Ordinance was signed by Mr. Creech Jones and Sir Mark Young. The succeeding Governor and the Secretary of the State of the Colonies also repeated their approval, and the date of the first Council meeting was fixed for May 1, 1946. This summary roughly covers the essential stages of the development of the Constitutional Reform that would have brought Hong Kong up to date with the other territories of the British Empire.

But four years and four months have come to pass since the Proclamation of Sir Mark Young and the public, apart from hearing "fanciful sounds of steps on the staircase," has been nothing but the "shadows of the future."

In July last year, the Hong Kong Chinese Reform Association, in collaboration with 128 civic bodies and organisations, signed a joint Petition to the Colonial Office, and presented it to the Government in person by Mr. Shum Chai Wah, Chairman of the Chinese Manufacturers' Union, Mr. Robert, D.C., Chairman of the General Chamber of Commerce of Kowloon, Mr. Daniel W. F. Chan, Chairman of the Kowloon City Chamber of Commerce, Mr. S. Y. Wong, and Mr. Ma Man-Idi, Chairman and Hon. Secretary General respectively of the Hong Kong Chinese Reform Association. Another year has again elapsed and nothing has been heard of it.

Therefore, the 10-point Questionnaire is decided upon as the best means of expressing public opinion of the Community in a form demonstrable for the benefit of London.

KCR record tonnage

A record monthly tonnage of goods (since the end of the war) was carried by the British Section of the Kowloon-Canton Railway last month, according to the August report of the General Manager of the Section.

The figure was 35,193.51 tons, which brought in revenue of HK$231,410. During the month, three special trains were run on August 24 and 25 in connection with the movement of troops and their equipment to Korea.

"Traffic" on the railway in the period under review consisted mainly of cargo of commercial goods for which full rates were charged. The results considerably increased goods receipts, which more than outweighed the reduction in passenger revenue.

Principal goods forwarded were iron bars, galvanised iron wire, galvanised iron sheets, steel plates, iron hoops, machinery parts, rubber tubes, rubber tyres, foreign medicines, and various chemicals, sugar, quinine, contract asphalt, rusty iron wire, jute and cottonseed oil.

Inward goods were principally wood oil, beans, tea oil, hemp, and some pigs and poultry. Train punctuality was good during the month. There was a most marked improvement, since the introduction of the new timetable on June 1. This was due to the alterations then made to train timings in order to fit in with the improved conditions of travel, which gradually came into being on the Chinese Section after the cessation of air raids which enabled them to resume daylight services in April.

There has also been active co-operation on the part of both mechanical and traffic staff in a co-ordinated effort to eliminate unnecessary delays.

TAIPO ROAD BRIDGE REPAIR

Repairs will be carried out on the bridge at the 12 1/2 mile mark, between Sha Tin and Tai Po, from 12 midnight to 1 a.m. tomorrow and again between midnight and 1 a.m. on Friday.

This bridge will therefore be closed to all traffic.

Motorists are asked to travel by way of the Sha Tin Road, during these hours.

New cargo ship completes trials

The British India Company's new cargo liner the ss. Ordla successfully completed her trials on the Clyde last month and will shortly be leaving the United Kingdom for employment on the Company's Eastern services for which she has been designed.

The Ordla, a single-screw vessel of the open shelter-deck type has been built by Messrs. William Denny and Bros. Ltd., and was launched at their Leven Shipyard at Dumbarton in June of this year.

The ship has a gross tonnage of 5,424 and is capable of carrying a total dead-weight of about 9,000 tons, with 400,000 cubic feet total capacity. Her length is 442 feet, 4 1/2 inches, breadth 57 feet 3 inches, and depth 38 feet.

The ship's five holds are equipped with derricks lifting 150 and 10 tons, and a heavy-duty hoisting system. In addition to natural ventilation, the ship is fitted with the De-Hold system installed by Thermo-Tank Ltd. The accommodation for the officers and crew is of the most modern standard.

The Ordla is fitted with oil-fired boilers and her reciprocating engines with Bauer-Wach turbines give her a service speed of 12 knots. Provision is also made for easy conversion to coal-burning. In addition to being fitted with the latest type of Marconi wireless equipment, the ship is also fitted with Marconi Radar Equipment.

She is the second of two similar vessels ordered by the Company from Messrs. Wm. Denny and Bros. Ltd., sister ship, the Olinda, having been in service since March, 1950.

Soldier fined

Dennis Ivor Colley, aged 21, Sipper, 54th Field Squadron, was fined $25 or seven days' imprisonment by Mr. H. H. Shing Lo at Central yesterday, when he pleaded guilty to a charge of obstructing a police corporal in the execution of his duty.

Defendant was also bound over in $100 for six months.

According to the prosecution, at 11.35 p.m. Monday, a party of police were on patrol duty in Hennessy Road and Queen's Road East.

A police corporal saw a woman talking to two European men and arrested her on suspicion of being a prostitute.

While the constable was on the way to the bus stop, defendant came along and pushed the woman by the arm. When the bus came, defendant tried to push the woman to the bus. Defendant was later arrested.

Mr. H. H. Shing Lo told the court that defendant's record was good. She had been in the Army for two years and had been in the 12th month of her term in Hong Kong.

Gold Coast may grow all its own tobacco

Accra, Gold Coast, September 5.
This British West Africa protectorate may grow all its own tobacco within the next five years, saving over £1,000,000.

Mr. D.J. Rogers, manager of the British-American Tobacco Company for Nigeria, arrived here recently to see whether the Gold Coast can become self-sufficient in tobacco. At present it imports more than 2,000,000 pounds annually.

Mr. Rogers is reported to be pleased with the results of his visit, during which he examined tobacco-raising experiments of the Gopje Development Company at Damour.

The Government is also interested in other crops primarily for export. Some of them are as follows:

Bananas: Export trade in bananas is highly specialised, and difficult to begin for both agricultural and commercial reasons. The Gold Coast does not operate the plantation system, under which bananas can be raised most easily.

Copra: The Department of Agriculture maintains several coconut nurseries and distributes seedlings. Because the price of copra went up recently from £24 to £30 per ton, there are great possibilities for expansion here.

Beans and rice

Soya Beans: The bean thrives well here, but farmers have not yet shown any interest in growing it. Intensive Government propaganda may improve the situation.

Coffee: The Gold Coast now grows only a little coffee of poor quality. Export prices have risen in the last few months from £81 to £125 per ton, and interest may be aroused among farmers.

Rice: Possibilities for this crop are also great on the Gold Coast, but production has decreased since its high of 10,000 tons per year before 1948. As with many other crops, Government stimulation may result in growing enough rice to make an important export.—United Press.

SUEZ CANAL

The Hague, September 4.
Holland has asked Egypt to withdraw the restrictions on traffic through the Suez Canal, it was officially stated here today.

In a note submitted on August 27, the Dutch Charge d'Affaires in Cairo said that it was "materially impossible to guarantee the final destination of traffic through the canal as the Egyptian provisions required."

Holland is the latest of several countries to protest against the restrictions.—Reuter.

Electrical strike postponed

Washington, September 4.

The International Union of Electrical Workers agreed today to postpone the nationwide strike due for Tuesday against the General Electric Company to allow time for new Federal mediation efforts.

The Federal mediation chief, Cyrus Ching, invited the Union and management officials to meet with him here on Wednesday to resume bargaining on the Union's demand for a 10-cent per hour wage-pension increase.

He said that General Electric plants are engaged in production vital to effective prosecution of the national defence programme and the strike would be the most serious threat to the Korean war effort.

Mr. Ching expressed confidence that the contract dispute can be settled through mediation efforts and said, "I urgently request that both parties take no action in the interim that will result in any further interruption of work, production and operations."

A Union spokesman said, "we will be available immediately to consider any action that comes from the meeting of the Union and management with Government-conciliators."—United Press.

PAKISTAN RUPEE EXCHANGE RATE

London, September 4.

Mr. Ghulam Mohammed, the Pakistan Finance Minister, said here today that Pakistan had not regarded, and should not regard, her exchange ratio for the rupee as a political question.

He added, "When discussing such delicate economic questions, we should study them in a detached, scientific manner and not allow ourselves to be guided by sentiment or prestige and ideas of politics."

"I had found a tendency among certain important business interests in Pakistan to look at the exchange rate question in a non-scientific manner, and I warned against it."

"My warning only bears out the view of the Pakistan Government that its decision not to devalue the Pakistan rupee when the Pound Sterling was devalued was taken on a purely economic and financial basis."

Mr. Ghulam Mohammed is leaving today for Paris to attend the meetings of the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank.—Reuter.

New York, September 4.

The Jalakanta arrived here on Tuesday and left again the following day.—Reuter.

LOWSON BEATS HUTTON
IN RACE FOR 2,000 RUNS

London, September 4.

Hutton and Lowson, Yorkshire's opening batsmen, engaged in a big stand for the County against the MCC at the Scarborough Festival today and also engaged in a race for their 2,000th run of the season.

Lowson won this when he scored 23 runs and Hutton was unfortunate to be run out when one run short of the figure.

Six bowlers were tried in an effort to separate the pair, who were parted by Hutton's run out when he was 85 runs out of 143 runs scored in two hours and 20 minutes.

Lowson went on to reach 90 runs when he was caught and then Halliday and Watson had a stand of 74 runs in 45 minutes.

Watson hit one ball out of the ground while Wilson enlivened the last hour by hitting four sixes and four fours.

Yorkshire easily gained a first innings lead. In fact, they were ahead of the opposition for the loss of only three wickets.

Hampshire struggled hard against Gloucestershire but had to follow on 171 runs behind. A second wicket stand of 84 runs in two and a half hours was followed by the fall of nine wickets for 46 runs.

Deadly spell

Tom Goddard was chiefly responsible for the collapse for a deadly after-ten spell of 9.2 overs gave him four of his six wickets for only 16 runs.

Hampshire's first wicket pair were parted before stumps were drawn.

South had a definite advantage over the North at Kingston, for they added to their first innings lead of 63 runs to lead at the close of play today by 317 runs with three wickets in hand.

The speed bowling of Ridgway, which got rid of Ikin, Grieves and Howard in the same over, demoralised the North when they resumed this morning and, despite a fighting innings by Oldfield, they could not gain the first innings lead.

Attack of lumbago

Sound batting by Watkins, Barnett and Ames consolidated the South's position though Ames was unlucky to be forced to retire when 33 runs, owing to an attack of lumbago.

Worcester could have enforced the follow-on against Leicestershire, but did not do so, and there is likely to be an interesting finish to this game tomorrow.

Worcester applied all the energy and enthusiasm of an opening match to this, the final game, at Leicester. Three great catches, two close to the wicket and one on the boundary, were major blows for Leicestershire.

Howarth made the ball turn and was always worrying the batsmen, only Berry, Tompkin and Lester showing resistance. Berry hit 18 runs off four balls from Broadbent.

Close of play scores

The following were the close of play scores in first-class cricket matches played today:

At Scarborough: The MCC 249, Yorkshire 300 for seven (Hutton 85, Lowson 90, Halliday 55, Wilson 50).

At Bournemouth: Gloucestershire 304 for seven declared, Hampshire 133 (Rayment 58, Goddard six for 65) and 34 for one.

At Kingston-on-Thames: South of England 190 and 264 for seven (Watkins 80, Barnett 69) North of England 140 (Oldfield 63, Ridgway five for 35, Sims three for 23).

At Leicester: Worcester 397 for nine declared and 98 for four (Richardson 50), Leicestershire 215 (Berry 63, Tompkin 53, Howarth five for 46).

At Dublin: MCC 161 and 129 for two (Rudd 54 not out), Gentlemen of Ireland 198 (Bergin 71, Chesteron five for 35). There was no play after the tea interval owing to rain.—Reuter.

Hart and Du Pont
reach final of Women's Singles

Forest Hills, September 4. Miss Doris Hart (Florida) reached the final of the women's singles in the United States Lawn Tennis Championships by defeating Miss Beverly Baker (California) by 6-4, 6-1 here today.

In the semi-final of the women's singles, the superior court-craft of Miss Hart proved too much for 20-year-old Miss Baker. The latter put up a hard fight in the first set and, for a time, seemed likely to win, but Miss Hart eventually broke through her service and took the set at 6-4.

In the second set Miss Hart was much the better player and won it by 6-1.

Became over-eager

Mrs. Margaret Du Pont (the holder) beat Miss Nancy Chaffee in the second semi-final by 6-1, 1-6, 6-0.

In the first set Miss Chaffee started well but became over-eager and could not match the consistency of her opponent. She curbed her spirits, played more cautiously and outwitted Mrs. Du Pont to win by 6-1. But in the last set Mrs. Du Pont found her best form and, with amazing speed and brilliant placed shots, won the set without conceding a game.—Reuter.

West Indies
vs. South of England

Hastings, September 5.

The South of England side, in their second innings against the West Indies cricketers, had made 100 for five wickets at lunch today. They had made 104 in their first innings against 200 by the West Indies tourists.

Monday's play

Hastings, Sussex, September 4.

The burly wicketkeeper, Clyde Walcott, scored 103 runs, his fifth century of the tour, and helped the West Indies cricket team to gain a first innings lead of 92 runs over the South of England today.

The West Indies were all out for 280 runs in reply to the South's first innings total of 104 runs, Stuart Surridge, the Surrey fast medium bowler, taking five wickets for 73 runs.

At the close of play the South were 51 runs for no wicket and were still 41 runs behind.—Reuter.

Cheung Chau resident wins long distance
swimming competition

Lo Loi-sing, 35-year-old resident of Cheung Chau Island, won the long distance swimming competition from Cheung Chau to Hong Kong held on Monday.

Lo covered the course of approximately 13 miles in six hours 45 minutes.

The race, which was organized by the Cheung Chau Athletic Association, was the first to be held since the Liberation.

The eight swimmers who participated in the race left the pier at Cheung Chau Island at 7:30 a.m.

However, of the eight only Lo managed to complete the course. He reached the finishing point at the Chung Shing Bathing Pavilion at 2:35 p.m.

LO LOI-SING

This is not the first time that Lo has swum this course, as in 1948 he swam from Hong Kong to Cheung Chau, taking a little more than six hours to cover the distance.

Lo who can lay a claim of being one of the most versatile long distance swimmers of the Colony, said that his ambition is to swim from Cheung Chau to Hong Kong and back again without rest. He is training hard to achieve his ambition and may make the attempt next year.

Less than three hours after the start from Cheung Chau, three swimmers gave up through fatigue.

An hour or so later, two swimmers were approaching Cheung Chau when they saw a big fish and fearing that it might be a shark, they gave up the race and were taken into the accompanying life boats.

On nearing Hong Kong only Lo and another swimmer, Fung Yuk-shu, were in the race. Fung was overcome with fatigue with less than a mile to go and had to give up.

Yachting notes:

Cdr. Nixon wins
Singapore Trophy

By "MOONRAKER"

On Liberation Day a Dinghy race, sailed for the Singapore Trophy, which was presented by certain members of the Royal Singapore Yacht Club who recently visited Hong Kong, was won by Cdr. Nixon.

The day was a typical Hong Kong summer's day, with extremely light South Westerly airs and a strong tide.

The postponement of the race was contemplated, but in view of the fact that certain members of the Royal Navy had obtained special leave to participate and as the breeze appeared to strengthen after lunch, a start was made at 3:15 p.m.

Most dinghies wisely kept well up tide of the starting line, but Cdr. Nixon and Col. Brown did not sufficiently allow for the tide and crossed after the remainder of the fleet.

Gains a clear lead

However, after the start, the breeze freshened slightly and Nixon overhauled the rest and gained a clear lead after the first mark.

He retained this lead during the race but Howell, in number 6, appeared at one point likely to overhaul him on the first lap.

Nixon, however, who probably gained a slight advantage by sailing single-handed, managed to keep ahead and crossed the line more than two minutes ahead of Howell.

Furrer, also well in the van, cut things a bit too fine when trying to force the pace at the last mark and was carried onto the buoy by the tide.

The 3rd race in the Ladies Summer Series was sailed on Saturday under conditions sufficiently trying to exasperate helmswomen with their crews and vice versa.

Most boats got off to a good start with a light south-easterly breeze, but by the time the first mark was rounded, Ann Boyle was well in the lead.

A question of luck

From the first mark to the second she maintained her lead, but all the other positions changed frequently and there is no doubt that it was entirely a question of luck as to which boat gained the advantage of the variable and all too infrequent puffs of wind.

It was at this point that Ann Boyle, who was sailing a single-handed boat, was apparently over-shooting the third mark by a wide margin.

Joan Winder then decided to follow this example and undoubtedly this course was a wise one for these two boats held a steady wind against a strong tide, enabling them to round No. 1 buoy far in advance of the following boats which, by taking the direct course, were barely able to stem the tide.

These others were experiencing light fluky winds and were at times drifting stern first towards Ly-Mun.

Sorry drift

However, after a long time, and after frequent changing positions, they rounded the last mark and began a sorry drift towards the finishing line.

Most of them failed to make the line at once and were again compelled to beat up against the tide to round the distance mark.

The only boat which managed to cross the line directly was called by Ann Boyle, who had made the necessary allowance for the strong tide and falling breeze.

Although this was a disappointing afternoon, the turnout of lady helmswomen was gratifying and it is hoped that they will not be discouraged from future participation in these events.
